

BULLET ENDS LAWYER'S LIFE

John V. Streed Is Found Dying At Cambridge
From A Wound In His Head.

A MYSTERY ENVELOPES THE CAUSE

Revolver With One Chamber Empty Is Found Near The Body While Attorney's Pistol Was At Home.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPTS-M'RAE.]
Cambridge, Ill., Sept. 27.—John V. Streed of Cambridge, vice president of the state organization of the Swedish-American Republican league and one of the widest known attorneys of Henry county, is dead as the result of a bullet wound inflicted in the back of his head. The coroner's jury is wrestling with the question whether he was murdered or committed suicide.

The body was found at 5 o'clock Tuesday morning at the door of an out-house at the back of the lot on which the postoffice building, in which he had office and living rooms, stood. The body showed signs of life, but it was evident that the man was in a dying condition. Shortly after 10 o'clock the breathing stopped and the mystery which hung over the case deepened.

No word was uttered by the victim from the time the body was discovered until death sealed his lips.

Body in Pool of Blood.

Arthur Crawford, a butcher of Cambridge, discovered the bleeding form when he was starting his day's work. The body lay on the ground, the head being surrounded by a great pool of blood. One foot was on the step of the small out-house, and blood being found on the step, it was surmised that the shooting occurred while Mr. Streed stood in the door.

Under the body when it was moved there was found a revolver, thirty-two-caliber and hammerless. Five of the chambers were loaded, but the sixth was empty. It is supposed that the bullet from this sixth chamber was the one which entered Mr. Streed's head.

The attorney's own revolver was found in a drawer in his room.

In the pool of blood in which the head lay was found a handkerchief, giving rise to the belief that the dying man had taken it from his pocket after he had been wounded.

Lamps Were Burning.

Mr. Streed had his law offices above the postoffice on East street and had living rooms on the opposite side of the hall above the Chronicle office.

It was to those rooms that he proceeded when he left the livery stable at 11 o'clock Monday night after returning from a drive to Alpena, twenty miles west. He is married, but his wife is now in Michigan visiting at the home of her parents. He had no children.

When the body was found it was fully dressed and it appeared that the clothes had not been removed after he left the stable.

Tuesday morning after the body had been discovered and men went to Mr. Streed's rooms they found two lamps burning, one in the front and the other in the back room.

Case Is Puzzling.

On the table in one of the rooms were numerous letters and it seemed that Mr. Streed had been reading the letters previous to his departure. There is difficulty in reconciling people here to a theory of either murder or suicide. Mr. Streed had no enemies so far as known, hence there appears no motive for murder, yet the direction of the bullet wound in the head makes some people certain that the gun was not fired by his own hand.

Mr. Streed's business affairs were in good condition and his domestic relations were happy. His practice was increasing and he apparently had no reason for taking his own life. The whole affair is shrouded in great mystery.

Mystery Deepens.

The mystery deepens about the death of John V. Streed, the prominent attorney and politician found dying. The coroner's inquest was adjourned to this afternoon in the hope of new witnesses. The coroner admits that he is baffled if only the evidence now at hand is found. It was discovered today that several drops of blood were dried on the steps to his apartments, and it is thought possibly he was shot there and carried to the place where found. His wife will return this evening. It is known that she warned her husband of some impending danger of which both knew. It is thought she may suggest a clue. No one is suspected as yet.

von Meyer, the American Ambassador to Russia, sailed today for the United States on a leave of absence. He has been stopping a short while in Germany, where he was received and entertained by the Emperor and Empress. Mrs. Meyer is now visiting friends and relatives in America, and it is understood, will join her husband on his return trip to Russia.

San Francisco, Sept. 27.—Secretary of War Taft and most of the distinguished party which went to the Philippines with him last July, returned today on the steamer Ceres. The Secretary was looking the picture of health and said that he enjoyed his trip very much. The other members of the party who remained in the East are with Miss Alice Roosevelt, who will not reach the United States for three weeks to come. Secretary Taft has been overwhelmed with invitations to attend banquets and receptions in his honor, but denied them all, stating that it was necessary for him to hasten to Washington as quickly as possible.

The Democratic leader intends making an extensive visit in the Philippines, and from there will probably go to Australia and New Zealand. In India, Mr. Bryan says, he will make a special study of the English dealing with the colonies. The entire journey, including the European trip will consume about a year. Mr. Bryan's son also accompanies the party.

EMPEROR MADE "A FAUX PAS"

His Attempt To Prejudice American Congressmen Calls World Attention To Him.

DENIES HE MADE THE STATEMENTS

That Were Credited To Him By His American Visitors
—Calls Their Reports Breach of Etiquette.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPTS-M'RAE.]
Berlin, Sept. 27.—Emperor William is thoroughly angry at what he calls the breach of etiquette, the violation of confidence and the lack of appreciation shown by the party of American congressmen who recently visited him and with whom he discussed the Japanese situation. The publication of what the war-chief of the Germans, called the "Yellow Peril" as declared in flaming headlines in American newspapers, has caused more than a little annoyance to the Emperor. Reports of this interview, which William denounces as false, have been sent to Japan and the Japanese minister has entered a formal protest with Von Buelow, asking for an explanation. Thus far all the satisfaction he has received has been the announcement most formally that the Emperor has been misquoted; not only misquoted but also misrepresented according to Von Buelow. A London, England, version of the affair is contained in the following dispatch: "A party of American congressmen after visiting with the Kaiser passed through here (London) on their way home. In an interview they gave a reporter for a sensational American paper, they gave the impression that the Emperor tried to convert them to his views which were inimical to Japan. They believed that the Emperor of Germany tried to prejudice them against the Japanese nation and that he is now angry when he finds his efforts have acted as a boomerang." This latest phase of the situation brings up all the stories that were prevalent during the progress of the war that Germany was ready to aid Russia should it become necessary and embroil Europe in an international war.

FIGHT A DUEL WITH GUNS IN CROWDED EXPRESS CAR

Two Pacific Express Messengers Fight It Out And Both Are Nearly Killed.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPTS-M'RAE.]
Decatur, Ill., Sept. 27.—Two men in the employ of the Pacific Express company on the Wabash railroad fought a duel with revolvers in a crowded express car between Bement and Decatur, which ended in both being so seriously wounded that their lives are in danger. J. E. Ryan of Chicago was the regular messenger of the car and the other party to the duel is named Greene, also of Chicago. It is said that Greene entered the car at Bement and that the shots were heard as soon as the train left the station. When train officials reached the car both men were barricaded behind express packages watching for a chance to shoot the other and both were badly injured. The cause of the trouble is unknown. Both men were taken to a hospital in Decatur, where it is said that the chances for their recovery are slight.

TAINTED MONEY DISCUSSION AT THE BANKERS' MEETING

Illinois Financiers Listen To An Able Discussion On This Subject By Dunham.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPTS-M'RAE.]
Bloomington, Ill., Sept. 27.—More than 100 delegates attended the opening session of the fifteenth annual convention of the Illinois Association of Bankers.

Mayor James S. Neville delivered the address of welcome. The response was by Frank C. Allen of Moline. Other speakers were E. D. Durham of Onarga, state president; W. L. Moyer, president of the National Shoe and Leather bank of New York; Frederic F. Norcross of the American Society company, and F. A. Grandall, president of the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Bank Clerks.

In his annual address President Dunham said in part:

President's Address.

"It is significant that the year just closing has coined two significant terms—'frenzied finance' and 'tainted money.' The former tells of a reckless disregard of long established rules for the government of financial transactions; of the unsafe and rash policy adopted by the management of the geo-rich-quick concerns. The exploitation and explosion of such concerns is slowly but surely learning a return to the old path. The 'get-rich-quick' fever is epidemic in the land and will require much medicine to cure. Education for the masses along financial lines is sorely needed, and I am not sure that it would not be a good investment for the bankers' association to take the initiative in providing it."

Man Behind the Money.

"The second expression, 'tainted money,' is a more severe arraignment. It tells of a tainted man near. Only the man behind the money can give it taint. It is not origi, that gives it taint. There is probably no association of business men that has a greater measure of public respect and confidence than ours. As an association we can do much to elevate public standards. Our state has been peculiarly fortunate in having so few of the many cases of thievery and breach of trust discovered among bank employees of the country during the year."

CROP REPORTS ARE ALMOST COMPLETE

Good Yields Reported From All Parts of the State—A Year of Plenty.

Unsettled weather prevailed during the early part of the week, with heavy rains over the western counties Monday night. Generally clear and cooler weather prevailed during the latter part of the week, and farmers made good progress in completing their work. The soil is in excellent condition for fall plowing, which is well advanced; considerable seeding has been done, and early-planted winter grains are coming up in some localities.

Corn. The corn crop has reached maturity in this state, and much of it has been cut, with yields very satisfactory. Final results have proven much better than anticipated, both in quality and yield. During the early part of the season the weather conditions were as a rule unfavorable, and it was thought that corn would be a very poor crop. During the latter part of the season, however, more favorable weather conditions resulted in a material improvement in the general outlook, and the crop began to make remarkably rapid progress. While the weather conditions were not conducive to best results, the crop continued to improve steadily, and by the end of the season, taking the state as a whole, is fully as good as the average, and in many parts of the state much better.

Grains. Threshing has been delayed materially by frequent rains, and is not yet completed. Yields have been generally satisfactory, as a rule, notwithstanding the damage by rain and high winds. Much complaint has been made of grain rotting and sprouting in the shock, but the complaints of rust have not been so prevalent as might have been expected, considering the fact that the season has been marked by frequent and heavy rains in most sections.

Potatoes. The potato crop in this state will prove much below the average, except in limited localities, as rust and blight have been prevalent in all sections, and have seriously damaged the crop, both in quality and yield. A few points report a fair crop, but taking the state as a whole the results are very disappointing.

Tobacco. The greater portion of the tobacco crop has been secured and is now in the sheds. Yields are very satisfactory, both in quality and quantity. Considerable damage was sustained from hailstorms during July and August, but fortunately the damage was confined to small areas, and the yield was not materially affected.

Minor Crops. Sugar beets, field peas, beans, and other minor crops have as a rule been satisfactory throughout the season, both in quality and yield. Gardens have come through the season in excellent condition. The apple crop will prove almost a failure, as yields are light, and quality much below the average. "Cronmoo, Wood county: Bulk of crop gathered under favorable conditions; yield much below normal, on account of insects, high water and late frosts."

Crops All In. As all crops are now practically secured, the publication of this bulletin for the season of 1905 will be concluded with this issue. Correspondents are requested, however, to continue their reports until further notified, as the information contained therein is desired for publication in the National Crop Bulletin, issued at Washington, D. C.

Wagner's mighty festival play, in which text, stupendous scenic embellishment, and a noted company of fifty artists are united in a vast and mystical symbolism of one of the legends of the Holy Grail, will be given in English, at the Myers Grand Thursday, October 5.

Reports from other cities give promise of a dignified, impressive and splendid visualization of this famous work. The cast provided has won respectful consideration in the east. Lawrence E. Gratian will be seen as Parsifal; W. H. Murdoch as King; Richard Cotton as Amfortas, and Miss Eva Taylor as Kundry.

In the effort to produce the re-creational atmosphere of the original surroundings and in other details, the tradition of Bayreuth is preserved, except in the commencing time, which has been slightly changed. Formerly the commencing time was 5:30, and a two hour intermission was given for dinner. This long intermission has been done away with, which permits of commencing the first act at 7:45; the performance, concluding at 11 o'clock.

The public is most earnestly requested to subscribe to the rule that everybody should be seated before the house is darkened and the first act begins. It will be impossible to seat anyone at this juncture. Ample warning will be given before the rise of the curtain on each act by a squad of trumpeters, who will sound a "Parsifal" motif in the lobby of the theater.

Alice Fischer, who appears here in "The School for Husbands" at the Myers Grand Tuesday, Oct. 2, is undoubtedly one of the strongest and most original factors in the drama of today and leads one to wonder how far knowledge of character is absolutely necessary for the drama. Her earliest impersonations were those types known on the stage as alluring ladies, and yet when Alice Fischer made her debut in New York and created no little talk about Minna in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," she probably had not the faintest knowledge, or thought, or feeling of the outward life of such a person. She had been reared in a quiet little Indiana town, where "adventuresses" are quite unknown among the best people. She knew General Lew Wallace, Morris Thompson and Dan Voorhees, all great men of Indiana and great men of the nation who have since been gathered to the silent majority. Surely she could not find in her surroundings any of the elements of an education for her profession, yet no one who observed the incident and fatal smoke rings from her lips in the river scene of "The Sporting Duchess"

NEWSPAPER MILEAGE.

The new anti-pass law in Wisconsin is the subject of more or less discussion, and the interpretation of the law, has until quite recently been left with the attorney general.

Some of his rulings, however, have been so unsatisfactory that the constitutionality of the law is now being tested in the courts by an attorney of one of the railroads, who has caused suit to be brought against himself for using a pass.

The rulings on newspaper mileage have also been criticised, and the Chicago Chronicle, in commenting says that while the law which prohibits newspaper men who hold any kind of office, from traveling on mileage, may be considered good law in Wisconsin, that it would be regarded as a mild form of lunacy anywhere else.

To this the Attorney General objects, and his assistant, A. C. Ellis, attempts to reply by quoting the law and defending his construction of it. Under the rulings, newspaper men, who use advertising mileage, are barred not only from any kind of an office, but from committee work of any political organization.

If the law contemplated these foolish restrictions, there was method in the madness of the men responsible for it. Newspaper mileage is as much a first class ticket, as any form of full paid transportation issued, and the publisher pays $25.00 per 1,000 miles for it in just as good money as the man who produces the coin of the realm for his ticket.

It is argued that these tickets are issued in exchange for advertising, but that is no argument. The company enters into a contract on a cash basis for a given amount of publicity for a stated amount of money, and by mutual agreement, payment is to be made in a commodity.

Similar contracts are made by many country publishers with local merchants and there would be just as much sense in ruling that a man who wears a suit of clothes, paid for in advertising space, could not hold office and ride on a first class train as to rule that he can not travel on mileage paid for in the same commodity.

The publisher gives value received for every dollar's worth of mileage used and if the law places a ban upon him, and it does, as now interpreted, then to all appearances it is a designing law.

Many people are under the impression that newspaper men belong to a favored class, so far as railroads are concerned, and the statement is frequently made that it costs them nothing to travel.

They overlook the fact that every inch of advertising space produced, requires a liberal investment of money, and that the returns from these investments are frequently so meagre as to produce at best but a scanty living.

The average publisher is not a bond holder, and while he may travel on a railway ticket, paid him on account of advertising, when he takes the trouble to compute the cost of the commodity, he finds no trouble in discovering that he pays a liberal price.

The new anti-pass law is a monstrosity in many respects, and the Chronicle sized up the situation correctly so far as newspaper mileage is concerned.

WHO SHALL BE GOVERNOR?

The state of Wisconsin has been engaged in a continuous campaign for the past six years. There has been no contest between the acts, for the vaudeville performance has occupied the boards so completely that the time has been fully occupied.

The drama closed when the reform administration was endorsed and ratified by a legislature selected for that purpose, and while spasmodic efforts are being made to revive it, the general public is not in sympathy with the movement.

The perpetual and all the year round politicians are attempting to arouse public interest in the question of who shall be the next Governor, and the names of various candidates are freely discussed.

It might be well to remember that the state, for the first time in its history is under the primary law and that the initial test of this law on candidates for state offices will not occur for a year.

It will also be remembered that the men who favored this law, were strenuous in claiming that the people, and not the politicians, would select men whom they desired to support for office without the aid of caucus or convention.

The law is with us, and the devil is entitled to his due. In the meantime the people are not worrying very much about the next governor.

When the time comes every man who has interest enough to attend a primary, and this means a minority of the voters, will turn out and vote for the men who in his judgment are entitled to support. If the Governor is honest in advocating the law which has long been his hobby, he will keep his hands off and let the people decide.

In the meantime the next eight months should be devoted to business.

A LABOR DAY SPEECH.

Sharp criticism of the speech delivered Labor Day at Lake Shore before the St. Paul unionists by Joel P. Heatwole is offered by William Ellis, special representative of the Milwaukee road, says the Minneapolis Journal. He says that it was characterized "by as much misinformation and misleading argument as could well have been put into the space of time occupied."

Mr. Ellis analyzes the address in detail in an interview in which he says in part: "His attempt to create the impression, without making the statement directly, that the railroads corrupt judges and juries galore is completely and absolutely answered by the court records of litigation. There is no class of litigants before the courts which has as hard a time to secure simple justice as do the railroads. There is no class of litigation in which as much perjured testimony is flagrantly used, as in the cases arising out of claims against railroads."

Mr. Heatwole's assertion that the railroads maintain "jury fixers" would be amusing to attorneys engaged in trying railway litigation, if it were not that it is so atrocious.

The orator's statement that the railway capital of the country is two-thirds water, Mr. Ellis said, is refuted by the tax rolls of the states in which the railroads run. Wherever their property is taxed on the ad valorem basis, the roads pay taxes on more property than they have stocks and bonds outstanding.

The statement that the gross earnings have increased in five years fifty per cent, creates an impression that is not true, Mr. Ellis continues, because the number of tons hauled one mile increased 65.3 per cent, so that the gross earnings should have been 65.3 per cent larger if the rates had remained the same. As a matter of fact the gross earnings lacked 9.5 per cent of keeping pace in their increase with the increased service performed. The reason that gross earnings have increased fifty per cent, is that the amount of business has increased fifty-five per cent, which is not stated by Mr. Heatwole.

Rock county received from the state this year $15,500 for the care of its insane population. There are thirty county asylums, similar to the one in Rock county, and the state contributed some $400,000 to them during the past year. Wisconsin has the best system known for the care of the insane.

The Free Press has asked for time to answer Mr. Piester's charges. If justice is secured the paper will have time to repent at leisure a little later in the season. "The only republican paper in Milwaukee" has several things to learn.

Connor, McGilivray, or any other man who desires, has a perfect right to aspire to the office of Governor; and Senator La Follette has no right either directly or indirectly to interfere. If the primary law is good for anything, give the people a chance.

The death record from yellow fever this season is less than 14 per cent, while the typhoid record in Philadelphia last year was 35 per cent, yet yellow fever creates a panic, while typhoid seldom disturbs a community.

The new Gargill Memorial church is progressing rapidly and the building should be ready to dedicate in the early spring. The social rooms are models of convenience, which the society will fully appreciate.

Half a dozen new cement block houses are being built on Bunker Hill. They make a better building than lumber at two thirds the cost, and solve the question of cheap and durable building material.

The Democratic party is elastic in every state in the union but Wisconsin. The party is so well satisfied with the state administration that but little effort is made to break into the ranks.

The many friends of Rev. J. H. Tipnot will be pleased to learn that he has been returned to Janesville for another year.

If the town had a building and loan association, a large number of cement block houses would be put up next year.

PRESS COMMENT.

El Paso Herald: Governor La Follette has a bad sore throat. Probably scared by outgoing hot waves.

Chicago Tribune: If President McCall is not a millionaire he has been singularly remiss in living up to his opportunities.

Chicago Record-Herald: If King

Edward of England has become a follower of Dowie, as the latter claims, it may pay the doctor to try it on New York again.

Higginsville, Mo., Advance: A new definition of friend was given by a school boy the other day. Here it is: "A friend is a person who knows all about you and likes you just the same."

Milwaukee Sentinel: The district attorney's office may yet conclude to indict Mr. Piester for arson in order to establish his suspected connection with the blowing up of the Maine.

Shoebogyan Journal: Kansas is going to have a world's fair in 1911. There seems to be a good deal of the matter with Kansas.

Madison Journal: The Onondia reservation in Wisconsin has twenty-five Indians at the Carlisle school. One of the youths is a clerk in Hotel Brothers, Appleton.

Chicago News: When the new rule for slim waists and long skirts goes into effect, the physical culture movement will learn just how much of a pull it really has with the sex.

Exchange: A Century Magazine hard calls upon the poets of today to "awake, awake to power." It's a futile call. The poets will not be able to get themselves elected insurance presidents.

Detroit Free Press: An old maid never loses interest in the man she might have married. If he succeeds she prides herself on the fact that she could have had him. If he fails she is equally proud of the fact that she had foresight enough to turn him down.

Exchange: The wonderful mansion built by Senator Clark of Montana in Fifth avenue, New York, is nearing completion. The total cost will be about $5,000,000. It is not so large as one or two others in that neighborhood, but it is by far the most costly of any of them.

Oshkosh Northwestern: And so it was Mr. Stephenson himself who informed Mr. Piester of the personal hostility of some of the men who have been sued for heavy damages by the Milwaukee Leader. And this is not the first time, either, that "Uncle Ike" has talked too much.

Exchange: These Congressional ministers seem to take about the same view in regard to tainted money that was expressed by the Kentucky colonel when he tried to explain the difference in respect to whisky by saying that "All whisky is good, but some is better."

La Crosse Leader-Press: The state of Indiana deserves to lose something to the French lick gamblers for having so long tolerated them. Both French Lick and West Baden have been dens of infamy for a dozen years, and every governor of Indiana within that time has known all about them and had the power to suppress them.

Madison Journal: It seems that Mr. Lenroot is also in the enjoyment of an income as assistant counsel to the attorney general's office in the railway cases. The practice of using the state treasury to provide for the faithful is at its ripest development under the La Follette system and the attorney general's office is the most unblushing means of access. It will make a good topic of legislation.

Milwaukee Free Press: Mrs. Potter Palmer is at outs with King Edward. He called her down for driving her automobile too fast, and she, forgetful that he is a crowned head, told him he "couldn't talk," because at Carlisle only a few days before he drove so furiously that he knocked over a man, and but for being a king would have been arrested. Edward is said to have frozen stiff at this impertinence, and Chicago's first lady will have to move on.

Boston Globe: The figures which the Interstate commerce commission furnishes of the operation of the railroad system of the United States for a year show that one trainman was killed for every 120 employed and that one in every nine was injured. These are said to represent a proportion of casualties one-half as great as that of the whole Japanese army during the recent war, but the figures are for a single year and the casualties of the Japanese war cover a period of about twenty months.

Exchange: No bird, beast or creeping thing will touch a castor oil plant. It seems to be rank poison to all animals. Even a goat will starve before biting off a leaf, and a horse will snuff at it and turn up his upper lip as though it had the most detestable odor on the face of the earth. Locusts will pass it by, though they may eat every other green thing in sight, and there is no surer way to drive moles away from a lawn than to plant a few castor beans here and there.

New York Tribune: A tale is told of a Kansas minister, a great pietist, in the use of words, whose exactness sometimes destroyed the force of what he was saying. On one occasion, in the course of an eloquent prayer he pleaded: "Oh Lord! waken thy cause in the hearts of this congregation and give them new eyes to see and new impulse to do. Send down thy lever or lever, according to Webster's or Worcester's dictionary, whichever thou usest, and pry them into activity."

Fond du Lac Reporter: Some degenerate has for the past ten days been making a round of Catholic cemeteries in the northwestern part of the state, destroying the crosses over the graves. It hardly seems possible that the vandalism can have been committed by any one but an insane person or a degenerate, and it is probable that the culprit when discovered will be found to be a fit subject for an asylum than for a prison.

The Secret of Good Coffee

Even the best housekeepers cannot make a good cup of coffee without good material. Dirty, adulterated and queerly blended coffee such as unscrupulous dealers shovel over their counters won't do. But take the pure, clean, natural flavored

LION COFFEE, the leader of all package coffees—the coffee that for over a quarter of a century has been daily welcomed in millions of homes—and you will make a drink fit for a king in this way:

HOW TO MAKE GOOD COFFEE.

Use LION COFFEE, because to get best results you must use the best coffee. Grind your LION COFFEE rather fine. Use "a tablespoonful to each cup, and one extra for the pot." First mix it with a little cold water, enough to make a thick paste, and add white of an egg (if you wish to be used as a substitute), then follow one of the following rules:

1st. WITH BOILING WATER. Add boiling water, and let it boil THREE MINUTES ONLY. Add a little cold water and set aside five minutes to settle. Serve promptly.

2d. WITH COLD WATER. Add your cold water to the paste and bring it to a boil. Then set aside, add a little cold water, and in five minutes it's ready to serve.

3. (Don't boil it too long. Don't let it stand more than ten minutes before serving. Don't use water that has been boiled before.)

TWO WAYS TO SETTLE COFFEE.

1st. With Eggs. Use part of the white of an egg, mixing it with the ground LION COFFEE before boiling.

2d. With Cold Water instead of eggs. After boiling add a dash of cold water, and set aside for eight or ten minutes, then serve through a strainer.

Insist on getting a package of genuine LION COFFEE, prepare it according to this recipe and you will only use LION COFFEE in future. (Sold only in 1 lb. sealed packages.) (Lion-head on every package.) (Save these Lion-heads for valuable premiums.)

CHAPTER XVII.

THE HEIR INTERVENES.

Tanis the next day after the arrival of Menephtah there came a messenger from Thebes to Hotep, and the royal scribe returned to his apartments to read the letter.

And after he had read he was glad that he had secured himself, for his demonstrations of relief at the news of the messenger's arrival were most extravagant and unrestrained. For the moment he permitted no reminder of Kenkenes' present plight to subside his joy in the realization that his friend was not dead.

Having excited, he read the letter again, and then he summoned all his shrewdness to his aid.

He would wait till the confusion of the court's settling itself had subsided before he presented the petition to Menephtah. Furthermore, he would relieve his underlings and write the king's communications with his own hand till he knew that the reply to Kenkenes had been sent. Har-hat should be watched vigilantly.

But order and routine were not restored in the palace of Menephtah. The unrest that precedes a national crisis had developed into irritability and pugnacity.

Tanis was within hearing of the plights of Israel, and the atmosphere quivered with onion and portent. Much appeared in this place and that, each time nearer the temporary capital, and wherever he came he left rejoicing or shuddering behind him.

Meanwhile the fan bearer laughed his way into the throne. Menephtah's weakness for him grew into stubborn worship. The old and trusted minister of the monarch took offices and sealed their lips; the new held their peace for trepidation. The queen, heretofore meek and self-effacing, laid aside her spindle one day and, meeting her lord at the door of the council chamber, protested in the name of his dynasty and his realm.

But the king was beyond help, and the queen, angry and hurt, bade him keep Har-hat out of her sight and return to his murens. Thereafter even Menephtah saw her more.

The betrothal of Ramesses to Har-hat's daughter gave further material for contention. It seemed to indicate that the fan bearer had built for himself for two reigns.

Hotep's situation was most poignantly unhappy. He was fixed under the same roof with the man that had taken his love by plying. He must greet him affably and reverently every day. He must live in daily contemplation of the time when he must meet Masnath also as his sovereign—the wife of the prince, whom he must serve till death. Hardest of all, he must wear a serene countenance and cover his sorrow most surely for his own sake and for Masnath's.

Tan-user still remained at court. Seti, in a fume of boyish indignation at Ramesses, attended her like a shadow. Among the courtiers there were others who were not alive to the true nature of the princess and who joined Seti in his resentment against the heir.

Ammon-neses and Siptah, snarling and malevolent, had left the court abruptly on the morning of its departure for Tanis. The Har-hat received them once again, and an ominous calm settled over that little pocket of fertility in the desert—Nobahut.

Thus the court was torn with factions. Old internal dissensions made themselves evident again, but the vast murmur in Gushen was heard above the strife.

All this had come to pass in the short space of a month. When half of that time had elapsed Hotep, fearing to delay the petition of Kenkenes longer lest conditions should become worse rather than better, met the Pharaoh in the hall one day and gave him the writing. Earnestly the scribe impressed the importance of the petition and begged him to acquaint himself in an hour of solitude with its contents and the identity of the supplicant.

Menephtah promised and continued to his apartments. There Har-hat came this petition faithfully. It may be important, and I know not from whom it is. I promised Hotep it should be given honest attention.

For seven days thereafter every letter sent by the king was written by Hotep. At the end of that time he met Menephtah again, and, bonding low before him, asked pardon for his indisposition and begged to know what disposition of the son of Ptah had made of the petition of his friend. He was irritably informed that the matter had been given over to the fan bearer for attention, since the Pharaoh had been too oppressed with heavier matters to read the letter.

In his sympathy for his friend's strait the scribe gave over his objections to Rachel. Kenkenes had suffered for her, and, if he would, he could have her.

Between the king and persuasion was Har-hat, vitally interested in the defeat of any movement toward the aid of Kenkenes. The one hope for the sculptor was the winning over of the Pharaoh, and only one could do it, and that was Ramesses, who was betrothed to the love of Hotep and against her will.

Hotep, summoning his servant, had his disordered hair dressed, fresh robes brought for him and a glass of wine for refreshment. On the way to the palace top he met Tan-user, walking slowly away from the staircase. Ramesses, solitary and luxurious, was stretched upon a cushioned divan in the shadow of a canopy over the hypostyle.

"The gods keep thee, son of the sun," Hotep said.

"So it is thou, Hotep. Nay, but I am glad to see thee."

"I came to thee with news and a petition," Hotep began.

"Out with thy tidings."

"Thou dost remember thy friend and mine, that gentle genius, Kenkenes?"

"I am not like to forget him so long as a bird sings or the Nile ripples make music. Ostrich pillow him most softly."

"He is not dead, my prince."

"Nay?" Ramesses cried, sitting up.

"The knave should be bastinadoed for the tears he wrung from me!"

"Thou wouldst deny my petition. I am come to implore thee to intercede for him."

Ramesses bade him proceed.

"Thou art acquainted with the nature of Kenkenes. O prince, he is a visionary, an idealist, and so firmly rooted are his beliefs that they are to his life as natural as the color of his eyes. He is a beauteous worshiper. Author possesses him utterly, and her love blinds him to all other things, particularly to his own welfare and safety."

"In the beginning he fell in love, and a soul like his in love is most unreasoning, immature and terribly faithful. The maiden is beautiful—I saw her—most divinely beautiful. She is wise, for I saw that also. She is good, for I felt it, unreasoning, and when a man hath a woman's intuition a god hath spoken the truth to his heart. But she is a slave—an Israelite."

"By the gods of my fathers, I ought not to marvel! Nay, now, is that not like the boy? An Israelite, and half the noble maid of Memphis mad for him!"

"He is not for thee and me to judge. O Ramesses," Hotep interrupted. "The gods blew another breath in him than animates our souls. For thee and me such conduct would be the fancies of madmen; for Kenkenes it is but living up to the alien spirit with which the gods endowed him. It seems that Har-hat looked upon the girl and, taken by her beauty, asked her at the Pharaoh's hands for his harem."

"Ah, the—? Why does he not marry her?"

"It is not for me to divine," Hotep went on calmly. "The fan bearer sent his men to take her, but she fled from them to Kenkenes, and he protected her—hid her away—where none but Kenkenes and the maiden knew. Har-hat is most desirous of owning her, but Kenkenes keeps his counsel. Therefore Har-hat overtook him in Tape, where he went to get a signet belonging to his father, and imprisoned him till what time he should divulge the hiding place of the Israelite."

"Hath he put him to torture yet?"

"Aye, from the beginning, though not by the bastinado. He reads him with suspense, but I have more to tell. There was a signet, an all potent signet, which belonged to the noble Mentu."

"Aye, I remember," Ramesses broke in. "That should help the dreamer out of his difficulty."

"Aye, it should, my prince, but it did not. Kenkenes sent it to the Pharaoh, with a petition for his own freedom, but the cares of state were so pressing that the son of Ptah gave the letter, unopened, to Har-hat for attention."

Ramesses laughed harshly.

"Kenkenes would better content himself. The Hathors are against him."

"Is it not enough, O Ramesses?" Hotep answered sternly. "He hath suffered unswervingly. Now is it time for those who profess to love him to bestir themselves in his behalf. Thou knowest how near the fan bearer is to the Pharaoh. Persuasion cannot reach the king that worketh against Har-hat. Thou alone art as potent with the son of Ptah. Wilt thou not prove thy love for Kenkenes and aid him?"

Ramesses did not answer immediately. "Unquestionably he loaned his elbow on his throne and stroked his forehead with his hand. His black brows knitted finally.

"My hands are tied, Hotep," he began bluntly. "I permit the sway of this knave over my father because I am constrained."

Hotep broke in earnestly.

"Surely so small a matter of courtesy—if such it may be called—should not stand between thee and this most pressing need."

"Aye, thou hast said—if it were only a small matter of courtesy. Thou knowest, O my Hotep, that I am betrothed to the daughter of Har-hat."

Hotep was on his feet by this time, his face turned away. Ramesses could not guess what a tempest raged in his heart.

"Be thou assured," the prince continued grimly, "that only so long as Masnath is not yet mine shall I endure Har-hat. After that he shall fall as never knave fell or so deserved to fall before. Aye—but stay, Hotep. I have not done. I have some small grain of hope for this unfortunate friend of ours. The marriage hath been delayed. I shall press my suit and wed Masnath sooner, if she will, and Kenkenes need not decay in prison."

Hotep did not stay longer. He bowed and departed without a word.

Ramesses immediately hurried to the well of the stairway.

"Hotep!" he called. The scribe, half-way down, turned and looked up.

"Return to me in an hour. Give me time to ponder, and I may more profitably help thee," the prince commanded. Hotep bowed and went on.

The hour was barely long enough for the smarting soul of the scribe to soothe itself. Deep, indeed, his love for Kenkenes that he returned at all. Masnath's name, spoken so familiarly, so boastfully, by the prince was fresh outrage to his already affronted heart.

At the end of the hour he went once again to Ramesses.

"Thou hast said," the prince began immediately, "that Har-hat hath imprisoned Kenkenes till what time he shall divulge the hiding place of the Israelite?"

Hotep bowed.

"The fan bearer charges him with slave stealing."

"And sacrilege," the scribe added. The prince opened his eyes. "Aye. Kenkenes carried his beauty love into blasphemy. He executed a statue of Asaph in defiance of the sculptor's ritual. For this also Har-hat holds a heavy hand over him."

"He deserves his ill luck. Mark me now. He will not go mad with a year's imprisonment, and he will profit by it. Furthermore, he cannot be persuaded into betraying the Israelite if he knows how long and how much he will have to endure. Once sentenced, Har-hat can add nothing more thereto."

Ramesses clapped his hands. The attendant that appeared he ordered to bring the scribe's writing case and implements. When the servant returned, Hotep, at a sign from Ramesses, prepared to write. "Write thus to the jailer at Tape: 'By order of the crown prince, Ramesses, the prisoner, Kenkenes, held for slave stealing and sacrilege, is sentenced to imprisonment for one year.'"

Hotep lifted his pen and looked his rebellion.

"Write!" the prince exclaimed. "I do him a kindness, with a lesson added. Were it in my power to free him I would not till he had learned that the law is inexorable and the power of its ministers supreme. Go on—at such law as the prisoner may elect. No further punishment may be added thereto. Affix my seal and send this with our fall. Thou canst write whatever thou wilt to Kenkenes. For the Israelite I shall not concern myself. The nearer friends to Kenkenes may look to her. Mine shall be the care only to see that they are not harassed by the fan bearer. In this I fulfill the law. Let Har-hat help himself."

He slowly collected his divan, and Hotep dropped his writing materials and departed.

Meanwhile Kenkenes seldom saw a human face. Food and water in red clay vessels, bearing the seal of Thebes, were set inside his door by disembodied hands. At intervals he saw the keeper, always attended by the inevitable scribe, but the visit was a matter of inspection, and rarely was the prisoner addressed.

He expected the return of his messenger in twenty days after the man's departure. At the expiration of that time his suspense and apprehension became more and more desperate at the passing of each new day.

Eight days later, about mid-afternoon, while he lay on his pallet, the door was flung open and his messenger stood without. With a cry Kenkenes leaped to his feet and wrenched the scroll from the man's hand.

The letter was from Hotep, conveying such information regarding his imprisonment as we already know. Kenkenes read the missive calmly and paid the messenger according to his promise. The jailer, who had come with the man, read the sentence and bade the prisoner make his choice of labor.

"Anything so it will but give me a glimpse of the horizon," he said.

"Thou wilt pay dearly for thy sky," the keeper cautioned him. "The softest labor is within doors."

"Give me my wish according to the command of the prince."

The jailer shrugged his shoulders. "As thou wilt. Make ready to follow the canal workers tomorrow."

MOST CORN IS SAFE FROM THE FROST

MOISTURE DOES SOME DAMAGE

Missouri and Kansas Report Loss Due to Rains of Previous Week, While Nebraska Fields Suffer From High Winds.

Washington, Sept. 27.—The weather bureau in its weekly bulletin summarizes crop conditions as follows:

"The temperature during the week ended Sept. 25 was favorable throughout the country, being nearly everywhere above the normal. Rains caused some damage in portions of the Missouri and upper Mississippi valleys, while a considerable part of the south Atlantic and gulf states is in need of rain. Damaging frosts occurred in the middle Rocky mountain regions and light frosts with little or no injury, in portions of the lower lake region and interior of the middle Atlantic states.

"Except in limited portions of the Missouri valley corn has experienced a week of conditions highly favorable for maturing the crop, from 75 to 90 per cent of which is now safe from frost; the remainder will require only about a week of favorable weather. In Nebraska considerable corn has been blown down by high winds, but this will only make harvesting more difficult, without reducing the yield. Some corn in shock in Missouri and Kansas has been damaged by moisture, due largely to rains of the previous week.

Rain Halts Threshing.

"The thrashing of spring wheat in the Dakotas and Minnesota was interrupted by rains during the first half of the week, but stock thrashing and stacking are not yet finished. In the Dakotas the yield and quality are variable and generally disappointing.

"The reports indicate but little change in the condition of cotton in South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Oklahoma and Indian territories, a slight improvement in North Carolina, Missouri, Arkansas and northeastern Texas, and more or less deterioration in other portions of the cotton belt, although there is decidedly less complaint of rust and shedding in central and in portions of the eastern districts.

"Some injury to housed tobacco by moist weather is reported from portions of the middle Atlantic states and New England, but elsewhere the reports respecting this crop are favorable.

"No improvement in the apple outlook is reported; an inferior crop being indicated from practically all the important producing states.

"A poor crop of potatoes is generally indicated.

"Except in the east gulf states, where the soil has been too dry for growing, this work is unusually well advanced. Much seedling has been done and the early sown is coming up to good stands throughout the central valleys and middle Atlantic states."

Foreign Crop Summary.

Broomhall's weekly foreign crop summary says:

United Kingdom—A good start has been made with plowing.

France—Finer weather is needed; good wheat is sparingly offered.

Germany—Reports of potato crop conflicting; some expect record crop, but the quality is doubtful; the quality of wheat and rye is unsatisfactory and threshing disappointing.

Austria-Hungary—More rain wanted.

Russia—Beneficial rains in the south are confirmed.

India—Natives are now holding wheat firmly, but it is expected that there will be some exports in December, when at that time the position of the crop will govern the growers' policy.

Roumania—Drouth still unbroken.

CATARRH

A UNIVERSAL DISEASE

Catarrh usually begins with a cold in the head, but does not stop there. The mucous membranes all become inflamed and secrete a filthy, unhealthy matter which is absorbed by the blood and distributed to all parts of the body. The patient is then continually hacking and spitting, the nose is stopped up, the ears have a ringing or buzzing noise, the throat becomes sore, and as the unhealthy matter more thoroughly saturates the blood a general feeling of despondency takes possession of the system.

I had Catarrh for about fifteen years, and no man could have been worse. I tried everything I could hear of, but no good resulted. I then began S. S. S. and could see a little improvement from the first bottle, and after taking it a great deal, and I am as well today as any man. I think Catarrh is a blood disease, and know that it is the only cure on earth for the blood than S. S. S. No body thinks more of S. S. S. than I do. Lappe, Mich.

Local applications cannot cure Catarrh, because they do not reach the seat of the trouble. They relieve the inflammation and temporarily relieve the disease, but as soon as they are left off the trouble returns. The only way to cure Catarrh is to treat it through the blood. S. S. S. soon clears the blood of all Catarrhal matter and purges it of all irritating poisons, checks further progress of the trouble and completely cures the disease. S. S. S. keeps the blood in perfect order so that it can eliminate from the system all waste matter that will produce Catarrh.

Nothing equals this great vegetable remedy in the cure of this disease. Write for our book and any medical advice you wish. We make no charge for either.

SUPERVISION MUST BE CLOSE

Speaker Gives Advice to State Insurance Commissioners.

Bretton Woods, N. H., Sept. 27.—Important questions of insurance, including the general question of mutualization, were on the program for discussion at the thirty-sixth national convention of state insurance commissioners, which was opened Tuesday at the Mount Washington hotel. About 100 delegates from various states were present.

The convention was called to order by President Frederick L. Cutting, insurance commissioner of Massachusetts.

President Cutting recommended earnestly that the state insurance commissioners give a more careful scrutiny and study of the statements presented to them by the various insurance companies under their jurisdiction. He believed that the standard of efficiency in supervision should be raised and that the annual reports of the commissioners should be something more than a mere reiteration of the financial statements presented by the companies. In many instances, Mr. Cutting thought, deceptions were practiced upon the commissioners.

WHISKY IN PILLOWS

How Liquor Is Sold With Balsam Head Rests.

INGENUITY OF THE MOONSHINERS.

Burton Holmes Tells of Their New Ruse in Tennessee to Evade the United States Revenue Officials. Novel Experience of a Camping Party Near Jellico.

"Whisky pillows" are the latest device of moonshiners to dodge the United States internal revenue authorities, says the Chicago Post. Many stories have been told of the ingenious tricks resorted to in the sale of illicit whisky, but the "pillow" is the latest and most novel.

Burton Holmes, the lecturer, who has been in the mountains of Tennessee recently, tells of discovering the pillows thus:

"I had joined a camping party near the small town of Jellico, which is on the state line between Tennessee and Kentucky," he said. "Some one suggested a trip up the mountains to get pine needles or balsam pillows from the moonshiners, who sell them to the few tourists that reach this wild region of the Blue Ridge. It was after several hours' hard climbing that a full half mile off the trail we saw our first cabin. We all went over, and after several whoops and calls our efforts were rewarded by a woman coming to the door.

"We asked if she had any pine pillows for sale, and instead of answering she slowly and with great care looked us over. I could see that her inspection more or less satisfied her, but she said she 'didn't know' she would have to see, and, turning, she went back into the house.

"Almost immediately we could hear a hurried conversation that was being carried on in low tones, and in a surprisingly short time a man appeared and asked what kind of pillows we were looking for, 'men's or women's'.

"Not a little surprised at the question, I replied that we would like a few of both. My answer evidently puzzled him, for his eyes narrowed into a peculiar squint, and he told us he did not have any women's 'made up,' but that we could have loose balsam for these at the rate of 50 cents a pillow. He said he had men's pillows all ready, but they would be $1.50 each.

"Finally we were fitted out with enough balsam to make pillows for the women, and each man in the party had under his arm a rude sacklike pillow that felt as if it contained a brick. We had all been wondering what made the pillows so heavy until curiosity finally overcame one of the men, and with the help of a penknife he started an investigation.

"The mystery was soon solved, for when he withdrew his hand a full quart of moonshine whisky came with it. Needless to say, none of us that had purchased 'men's pillows' could use them to sleep on until slight alterations had been made."

"SIMPLE LIFE" AT WEDDING.

Pair to Adopt Plan in Future and Abandon Cooked Diet.

Annie Louise Ambrose and Edgar Wallace Conable were married recently at Los Angeles according to the doctrines of the "Simple Life," says a Los Angeles dispatch. No unnecessary word was spoken by the Rev. D. I. Jenkins, who performed the ceremony. The word "obey" was omitted.

Because it is a custom to take a honeymoon trip, the bride and bridegroom walked from church to their new home and began life at once with a menu that abolishes meats and all cooked foods, their principal articles of diet being nuts, fruits and vegetables. At the wedding supper which followed the ceremony no cooked foods were served. The party sat under trees and ate nuts and fruit.

A garden and orchard on their farm will furnish food, and so far as possible no articles of value not made by the wife will be worn by either. Simple methods will rule their home in everything, and this includes the dispensing with shoes.

The Peace Of—

[Observations by an American.]

"We'll call it the 'Peace of Portsmouth,'" says the loyal New Hampshire avian.

"No, 'yea don't," says the down east Yankee.

"It's the 'Peace of Kittery, Maine."

"How's that?" says the youth from Portsmouth.

"It's here the commissioners dwelled."

"I don't care a dern," says the Kittery man.

"It's here as the meetin' was held."

"Now, hark ye both," says the president's friend.

"You folks have got nothing to say. Who did all the work, I'd just like to know."

"It's the 'Peace of Oyster Bay.'"

Then authority spoke from the capital's halls—

"For the government couldn't be 'done'—"

"This achievement great," says the department of state.

"Is the 'Peace of Washington.'"

In such a serious state of affairs,

With trouble so surely a-brewin',

If we can't have peace as to where they made peace.

Why, the country 'll go to ruin.

So I reckon there's only one thing to do

To save us from strife and hate,

And that's to beseech good Emperor Bill

To come over and arbitrate.

Auto Doings.

Vanderbilt Race Oct. 14.
Daring Women Drivers.

The blue ribbon event of American auto circles, the race for the Vanderbilt cup, is to be held Oct. 14 over a twenty-nine mile stretch of Long Island (New York) road. In this race will compete the best made cars and the most expert drivers of America, France, Germany and Italy, the four greatest auto making countries in the world.

Already the drivers are training over the course, and each team has secured its headquarters, both for cars and for the army of helpers and mechanics that will travel with each outfit.

It is the general opinion that the course is the best one obtainable in this country, and some fast time is expected.

Oiling the road has already begun, and from Mineola along the toropike

MRS. D. W. HARPER, AUTO RACE WINNER. To Jericho, thence left to East Norwich and to Bull's Head tavern, the course has been sprinkled with crude oil, which makes driving absolutely dustless and a pleasure as well as a matter of safety.

It is certain that Thery, who won the Gordon Bennett cup, will not come to this country, nor will his partner, Callois. The French team will consist of Heath, who won last year's event, and Le Blou, Wagner, Salsa and Duray.

William W. Wallace of Boston will not be a contestant in the Vanderbilt race, and his place will be taken by Cedrino, who, with Lanica, Nazzari, Chevrolet and Sartori, will represent a single manufacturer. Five cars will comprise the German team.

There will be 500 policemen, deputies and flagmen to patrol the course, and Robert Lee Morrell, chairman of the Vanderbilt cup commission, is preparing a code of signals by which any contestant can be stopped in less than ten minutes.

The venturesome spirit of up to date womanhood seems to have no limit. Women auto racers are the latest feature of the sporting world, and several of them have won distinction because of the fast marks they have set up.

At the recent race carnival at Atlantic City, N. J., special classes were arranged for women, and Mrs. D. Walter Harper and Mrs. Ivan Cuneo won the two events, after giving a sensational exhibition of nerve and skill. They swung around curves at full speed and squeezed through tight places with the accuracy and steadiness of veterans.

Many loyal friends of Auto Racer Barney Oldfield claim that in view of the years he has been the undisputed champion of track racing he is the champion yet, notwithstanding his having been defeated several times. Although a comparatively unheard of man until this season, Chevrolet has many supporters and friends and they claim that he should be recognized as the champion.

Fortune Spent by Cup Hunters.

Although the silver cup offered by W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., for the Vanderbilt auto race is only worth $2,000, a thousand times that sum and probably more will be spent by automobile manufacturers and motor car enthusiasts in an effort to win it. A conservative estimate of the money put in racing machines, paid to racing men and mechanics and expended by visitors to the race, together with the cost of promoting it, runs up to about $250,000.

STORM SWEEPS MANILA DOING GREAT DAMAGE

Wind Attains Velocity of 105 Miles an Hour, Inflicting Property Loss Estimated at $500,000.

Manila, Sept. 27.—A typhoon swept over this city Tuesday. The storm lasted three hours and at 2 p. m. the wind attained a velocity of 105 miles an hour. The property damage is estimated at $500,000.

Ten natives were killed and thousands rendered homeless. In the botanical gardens and the telephone system was wrecked. Slight damage was done to the United States quarter-master's storehouses and the city was thrown into darkness.

The native districts were half swept away. Trees were uprooted and dozens of vehicles were upset. Thousands of electric light wires were blown down, filling the streets with flames until the current was shut off.

Traffic was suspended and all the streets were deserted. The trolley lines have suffered much damage. The police stations are feeding and sheltering thousands of homeless persons and the churches many more.

It is believed that the shipping in the bay had warning of the approach of the storm, though the ships have been invisible on account of the rain and have not communicated with the shore.

The police are doing excellent work. Live wires killed five Filipinos, including two policemen. Two hundred Filipinos were injured.

Erickson of the Minot National bank, now in the hands of a receiver, was arrested by Deputy United States Marshal Valentine on a warrant sworn out in the federal court charging him with making a false report to the comptroller of the currency. Erickson waived examination and was held to the federal grand jury in the sum of $10,000. The alleged false statement, it is claimed, was signed by President J. A. Erickson, Cashier Ole Erickson and Directors Slocum and Lloyd. SWALLOWS LEAD PENCIL DURING DRINKING BOUT

Man Finds Out How Far It Will Go, and Surgeons Remove Obstruction Two Years Later.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 27.—"Doctor, two years ago I swallowed a lead pencil and now I believe it is hurting me a bit."

With this assertion Robert Hannars approached an internist at the county hospital and asked that something be done for the pain in his side. Hannars was taken to the examination room, where he repeated the lead pencil tale, but the doctors only laughed at him. His case was diagnosed as appendicitis.

Within a few moments he was on the table and Dr. F. S. Hartmann was assigned to the operation. When the incision was made and the appendix examined the lead pencil, about five inches in length, was found.

Hannars told the physicians that two years ago when drinking with a friend the latter bantered him to thrust a lead pencil down his throat just "to see how far it would go." Hannars thrust the pencil down so far that he lost his hold on it and it slipped on down.

He felt no ill effects until about three weeks ago. Then his side began to pain him and he remembered the pencil incident.

TURFMAN MURDERS A TRAINER

John F. Farris Shot to Death by R. E. Lee Sims in Kentucky.

Stanford, Ky., Sept. 27.—John F. Farris, the race horse trainer, was shot to death by R. E. Lee Sims, owner of several thoroughbred horses and for whom Mr. Farris trained a 2-year-old. There were no witnesses to the trouble that led to the murder, but the two, it is said, had not been on friendly terms for several months. Farris was a widower about 55 years old and a confederate soldier.

An old Scotswoman who, at considerable personal inconvenience, had gone a good way to visit a friend who was ill, learned on her arrival that the alarming symptoms had subsided.
